1 Plaintiff Stephen Russell (“Plaintiff”), by and through his attorneys, hereby requests that
2 the Court take judicial notice, pursuant to Federal Rule of Evidence 201, of the following fact
3 (“Fact”):

4 1. Pursuant to Article II of the United States’ Treaty with Canada on Mutual Legal
5 Assistance in Criminal Matters (“Treaty”), “1. [The governments of the United States and Canada]
6 shall provide, in accordance with the provisions of this Treaty, mutual legal assistance in all
7 matters relating to the investigation, prosecution and suppression of offences. 2. Assistance shall 8 include: (a) examining objects and sites; (b) exchanging information and objects; (c) locating or 9 identifying persons; (d) serving documents; (e) taking the evidence of persons; (f) providing 10 documents and records; (g) transferring persons in custody; [and] (h) executing requests for 11 searches and seizures.” A copy of the Treaty is attached hereto as EXHIBIT A, and is accessible

14 The Federal Rules of Evidence provide that “[t]he court may judicially notice a fact that is 15 not subject to reasonable dispute because it: . . . (2) can be accurately and readily determined from 16 sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.” Federal Rules of Evidence, Rule
17 201(b). Moreover, “[t]he court: . . . (2) must take judicial notice if a party requests it and the court
18 is supplied with the necessary information.” Id. at Rule 201(c) (emphasis added).

19 Here, the Fact set forth above is not subject to reasonable dispute because it can be 20 accurately and readily determined by the Treaty itself (attached hereto as EXHIBIT A), which, as 21 an official government document, is a source whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned.
22 The Court therefore must take judicial notice of the above Fact.

WASHINGTON : 1988

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 22, 1988.

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Canada on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, with Annex, signed at Quebec City on March 18, 1985. I transmit also, for the information of the Senate, the report of the Department of State with respect to the Treaty.

The Treaty is one of a series of modern mutual legal assistance treaties being negotiated by the United States in order to counter more effectively criminal activities. The Treaty should be an effective tool to prosecute a wide variety of modern criminals including members of drug cartels, "white-collar criminals," and terrorists. The Treaty is self-executing and utilizes existing statutory authority.

The Treaty provides for a broad range of cooperation in criminal matters. Mutual assistance available under the treaty includes: (1) the taking of testimony or statements of witnesses; (2) the provision of documents, records and evidence; (3) the execution of requests for searches and seizures; (4) the serving of documents; and (5) the provision of assistance in proceedings relating to the forfeiture of the proceeds of crime, restitution to the victims of crime, and the collection of fines imposed as a sentence in a criminal prosecution.

I recommend that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to the Treaty and give its advice and consent to ratification.

RONALD REAGAN.

LETTER OF SUBMITTAL

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, February 11, 1988.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

THE PRESIDENT: I have the honor to submit to you the Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Canada on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, with Annex (the "Treaty"), signed at Quebec City on March 18, 1985. I recommend that the Treaty be transmitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

The Treaty covers mutual legal assistance in criminal matters. In recent years, similar bilateral treaties have entered into force with Italy, the Netherlands, Switzerland and Turkey; and others have been concluded (but not yet entered into force) with Colombia, Morocco, Mexico, Thailand, Belgium, the Bahamas and the United Kingdom on behalf of the Cayman Islands. The Treaty contains many provisions similar to those in the other treaties as well as some innovations.

The Treaty will not require further implementing legislation and will utilize the existing authority of the Federal courts, particularly 28 U.S.C. 1782.

Article I contains the necessary definitions. It defines a "request" under the Treaty and provides for a Central Authority in each State, which is responsible for complying with requests made by a Competent Authority or transmitting them to the Competent Authorities to do so. For the United States, the Attorney General or officials designated by him will be the Central Authority. For Canada, the Minister of Justice or officials designated by him will be the Central Authority. The Competent Authorities for both countries shall be law enforcement authorities with responsibility related to the investigation and prosecution of offenses. The article defines an offence within the scope of the Treaty, for the United States, as felonies and misdemeanors other than petty offenses, and for Canada, as any offense that may be prosecuted upon indictment or an offense created by the Legislature of a Province in a category specified in the Annex. The Annex states that the term offence includes securities, wildlife protection, environmental protection and consumer protection offences under the law of Canada or the United States. Article I also defines the "public interest" as "any substantial interest related to national security or other essential public policy."

Article II provides for assistance in the "investigation, prosecution and suppression of offences." The Treaty thereby provides for assistance at the investigative stage (such as grand jury proceedings), as well as after formal charges have been filed. Assistance under the Treaty will include: taking testimony or statements of persons; provision of documents records and evidence; executing requests for searches and seizures; obtaining of witness testimony; and other forms of assistance. The article explicitly states that it is not intended to create rights in private parties either to gather evidence or secure other assistance or to suppress or exclude in civil or criminal proceedings evidence obtained under the Treaty.

Article III provides that the parties may provide each other assistance pursuant to any other agreements, arrangements or practices, and, in exceptional cases, pursuant to the Treaty, provide assistance in respect of illegal acts that do not constitute offenses as defined in the Treaty.

Article IV states that when a party seeks documents, records or other articles of evidence known to be located in the territory of the other party, except when assistance is sought pursuant to other arrangements, agreements or practices, it shall request assistance under the Treaty. The parties shall consult in the event of the denial of a request or delay in its execution that jeopardizes successful completion of an investigation or prosecution. Unless otherwise agreed, at the end of 30 days after they were requested, consultations shall be deemed to have terminated and the parties to have fulfilled their obligations under this article.

Article V specifies the limited bases under the Treaty in which assistance may be denied by the Requested State. These bases are when the request is not in conformity with the Treaty or when execution of the request is contrary to the Requested State's "public interest," as determined by its Central Authority. The Requested State may postpone execution of a request if its execution would interfere with an ongoing investigation or prosecution. This article also provides that, before the Central Authority of the Requested State refuses a request, it should try to determine whether there is a way to render the assistance, subject to specified terms and conditions. If the Requesting State accepts the assistance subject to limitations, it must comply with those limitations.

Article VI provides that requests shall be made directly from one Central Authority to the other, and shall contain the information required by the Requested State to execute the request, including but not limited to, the subject matter and the nature of the investigation or proceeding to which the request relates, a description of the evidence, information or other assistance sought, and the purpose for which it is sought. It provides that when use of compulsory process is required in the Requested State, requests shall be made in writing, except that in urgent circumstances requests may be made orally, but they must be confirmed in writing "forthwith." The article provides that the Requested State shall use its "best efforts" to keep confidential a request and its contents, except when otherwise authorized.

Article VII obligates each party to execute requests promptly and, to the extent not prohibited by its law, in accordance with the directions of the Requesting State. It also provides that the courts of the Requested State shall have authority to issue all orders necessary to execute a request.

VII

Article VIII provides that the Requested State shall pay all ordinary costs relating to the execution of the request within its territory, except for the lawful fees of expert witnesses, the travel and incidental expenses of witnesses travelling to that State, and for translation and transcription expenses. The article also provides for consultation when expenses of an extraordinary nature are required to execute a request.

Article IX authorizes the Requested State, after consultation, to require that information or evidence furnished to the Requesting State be kept confidential or disclosed or used only subject to terms or conditions it may specify. Moreover, absent the prior consent of the Requested State, it restricts the disclosure or use of any information or evidence obtained under the Treaty to the investigation, prosecution or suppression of criminal offenses stated in the request. However, once the Requested State has consented to disclosure or has become public, the Requesting State may use the information for any purpose.

Article X obligates the parties to make best efforts to ascertain the location and identity of persons specified in the request.

Article XI creates an obligation on the part of the Requested State to serve any legal document transmitted by the Central Authority of the Requesting State. The Requesting State must transmit a document relating to a response or appearance in the Requesting State within a reasonable time before the scheduled response or appearance. A request for the service of a document relating to the appearance of a person in the Requesting State must include such notice as the Central Authority in the Requesting State is reasonably able to provide of outstanding warrants or other judicial orders in criminal matters against the person to be served.

Article XII provides that the Requested State may compel the taking of testimony or production of documents for the Requesting State by means available under and in accordance with the Requested State's laws. It also provides that every person whose attendance is required for the purpose of giving testimony under the article is entitled to the fees and allowances provided for by the laws of the Requested State.

Article XIII states that the Requested State shall provide the Requesting State with copies of publicly available records of government departments and agencies and may provide any other record or information in the possession of a government office or agency to the same extent and under the same conditions as it would be available to the Requested State's own law enforcement or judicial authorities.

Article XIV provides for the certification and authentication of documents and records in any manner required by the Requesting State or in any other mutually agreeable manner.

Article XV provides that the Requested State shall transfer a person in its custody to the Requesting State, for purposes under the Treaty, unless the Requested State has a reasonable basis to object or the person in custody does not consent. The Requesting State must keep that person in custody at all times and return that person immediately after the execution of the request.

VIII

Article XVI establishes a formal procedure for handling requests for the search and seizure of objects located in the Requested State for use as evidence in the Requesting State.

Article XVII requires that one Central Authority notify the other when it believes the proceeds of a criminal offense are in the territory of the other State. In addition, it provides that, to the extent permitted by their respective laws, the parties shall assist each other in proceedings relating to the forfeiture of proceeds, restitution to victims of crimes and the collection of fines imposed as a sentence for an offense.

Article XVIII provides that the parties shall consult periodically on the implementation of the Treaty and on developing other specific agreements or arrangements on mutual legal assistance.

Article XIX provides that the treaty shall enter into force on the date of the exchange of the instruments of ratification.

Article XX establishes termination procedures.

The Department of Justice joins the Department of State in favoring approval of this Treaty by the Senate as soon as possible.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE P. SHULTZ.
